

She comes from the air, the subtlest vibration, into the earthy elements, then disappears into thin air again.

Who is Faery Queen?

She presides over the elemental Kingdom and all the magical beings of that realm. She represents the inner light of the natural world, the Western version of the spirit in all things. She is connected with Celtic tradition.

She is the representative of the world of Faery.

Location/Sphere of Influence

Western world/in all untrammelled nature, particularly wooded areas.

Allies

All elementals

Nature & Description of Dakini

She is the Queen of all the elementals, the spiritual or magical energy forms that exist within the natural world. She has wings and a magical wand – a sprouting living branch that emanates light, tipped with a special light crystal. She has shimmering translucent iridescent wings, pointed ears, radiates white sparkly light and trails fairy dust.

She is adorned in rainbows, showing that she can only be seen through the refraction of the light, hidden as she and her realm are usually between the light rays, behind the veil of appearance, so subtle is her energybody. She reveals her Faery Queendom, which co-exists with your own, hidden yet vibrant. Hers is the natural sensuality of nature, both innocent and wise. She wears a filigree mask as she is on her way to faery ball and because her presence is often hidden to human eyes.

She is surrounded by little fairy versions of herself, all manifestations of her being. On the pathway through the woods, an ancient fairy highway, we see a magical miniature fairy carriage. Her realms are woodlands and grassy knolls, fairy rings and where wild flowers grow. She is one with the inner essence, the sensitive life energy that runs through all living things and is imminence itself.

She is mischievous, gracious, elegant, ethereal and sensual. She loves to play in the joy of being. She feels all the vibrations of the creatures and plants in her own being.

At the four corners, Celtic knots seal and protect her magic Queendom and pay tribute to the ancient connections between the world of Faery and Celtic mysticism.

Divinatory Meaning

The Faery Queen has graced you with her presence to let you know that you need to let more magic into your life.

Time to lighten up and see the playful, whimsical nature of things.

Play with your emotions. Watch them as they arise and suspend the need for reaction so you can watch them all play through you with equal bemusement, like a movie. Sadness and happiness, being angry or being pleased, frustration or completion, all these will appear as flickering light on the screen of your being and you, like Faery Queen, view it all with a knowing smile. For she knows, beyond the play of emotions runs the verdant stream of magic...

Faery Queen doesn't take anything too seriously. How could she? She asks, for if she did, such thoughts would be heavy and weigh her down. She is light as a feather after all, so how would she be able to fly?

She prefers the thoughts that have wings, they are light and travel on the softest breeze and catch the imagination with their suggestions of what could be. Such thoughts are very spontaneous and free and very freeing.

She is the purveyor of such suggestive thoughts and fantasies.

She is the portal to communing with the elementals of the elements. She reveals her Faery Queendom, which co-exists with our own, hidden yet vibrant.

Everything around you, all of nature, is filled with elemental energies, invisible beings who co-exist with our visible, known reality. This sensitive realm is filled with delicate, subtle energies.

The Faery Queen reveals her realm for those who have eyes to see. You must have those eyes, whether you think you believe in fairies or not, or she would not have shown herself to you, now would she?

Faery Queen represents a gift of magic for you. All you have to do is suspend your disbelief.

Are you sceptical by nature? Time to lighten up and start to play with more expansive ways of seeing, not limited by the box of logical thinking.

Imagine being a child again and looking at the world through those eyes of wonder, where magic can be real. Combine the wisdom of your experience with the innocence and freshness of the view of a child.

Children often can see fairies until they 'grow up' and learn that they are not 'real'.

The world of faery is an expression of the living spirits that inhabit the natural world, the realm that co-exists with the visible, tangible reality plane.

'Sensitives' can often sense these presences, so sensitivity is highlighted here.

Be sensitive to the presence of the Faery Queendom imminent in all of nature.

Develop sensitivity to the subtler aspects of life. You need to become quieter inside to do this. Its like a beautiful delicate song whispered on the breeze that you can't hear if you are making a lot of noise yourself, either audibly or inside your head with mental chatter.

Cultivate that quietness as well as a sense of expectancy, openness and alert awareness.

Develop curiosity as a tool to consciousness expansion. Fairies are very curious by nature, and quite mischievous.

Be open to the energies of all the various elementals. They come in all shapes and sizes.

They have been ignored and spurned, their contributions to the web of life unrecognized.

Faery Queen says could you please tell them they are welcome in your world?

They are very helpful, even if a bit naughty.

You could do with some elemental energies in your life.

Be in nature.

Indications

Recognise the myriad little miracles that continually grace your life.

Listen for faery laughter

Practices

1. Entertain the thought that everything in nature is inhabited by magical energies, its own inner light, even if invisible to the naked eye. Treat everything as if it was so, even if you don't believe it with your mind, try it as an experiment, and to honor Faery Queen.
2. Receive the gift of fairy dust from Faery Queen, a little bit of magic from her wand. See her touching you with it and bathing you in sparkling, shimmering light. Make a wish.
 1. Make a wish for the world of faery. They need all the good wishes you can send their way. Please make a really fun wish for all the fairies....

Dakini Transmission

I am the Queen of faery fair
I live in earth, I live in air
I exist in every living thing
And I myself a living spring
Of magic

Affirmations

I believe in magic
Magic flows through me and supports me
I can bring magic to any situation
I am my own fairy godmother
My wishes come true.